

Matt Holmes

Matt Holmes is a history worker who challenges inequality by cultivating more inclusive education, advocacy and leadership dynamics that redistribute power and create opportunities for underserved communities. Matt's diverse experiences have allowed him to impact once stuck dynamics into mutual purpose and create meaningful change, mostly by navigating difficult conversations with white audiences and historically white institutions. He weaves his experience as a history worker with cutting edge data sciences & transformational environmental justice projects to close the gap between academic disciplines, the public sector and the communities they each have failed to serve in his position as Environmental Justice Outreach Coordinator at Little Manila Rising.
